While in bed, she scrolls through reddit and finds an ad for PlanMe and decides to scroll through the comments and see if she should download it.

She decides to download the app and looks into it.

Joan notices that she has a lot more time to balance her free time. She starts going to the gym and takes up painting. She feels her mental health improving. She now goes to class and is more alively.

With all the improvement she has felt she decides to tell her students to download the app. The students grades in return also improve.
